

What I need to know by the end of this unit:

- A population density map shows how many people live in certain areas.
- The most populous cities in the United Kingdom.
- The name and location of some of . the world's major cities
- A capital city of a country is not always the most populated city.
- A megacity is a city with a population of over 10 million people.
- Most of the world's megacities are in Asia.
- There are push and pull factors are for people to live in big cities
- There are pros and cons of living in a big city.
- Cities are usually multicultural.
- London is a multicultural diverse city.

Vocabulary Focus – Top 5!

- Population – the number of people living in a certain place.
- City – Place where many people live closely together.
- Migration – when people move a long way, say to a whole new part of the country/ world,
- Megacity – a very large city, with a population of more than 10 million people
